

MAKING THE MOST of the few hours left before leaving for another picket duty in Antarctica is Radarman 3rd class David M. Herron, seen painting a penguin on the "bluenose" of the U.S.S. Calcaterra. Adhering to tradition, the bull nose of the ship was painted a deep blue to signify the crossing of the Antarctic Circle. As this is also a tradition with ships which cross the Equator, Radarman Herron painted on the little penguin as a distinguishing mark
